

Contributor's Notes

Akiko Fukushima, Ph.D., is a Senior Researcher in the International Cooperation Department at the National Institute for Research Advancement (NIRA) in Tokyo. She is the author of Japanese Foreign Policy: The Emerging Logic of Multilateralism, along with many articles and reports. Dr. Fukushima participates in government-sponsored track two dialogues in the region, and in policy deliberation councils that advise the Japanese government.

Benjamin L. Self is a Senior Associate at the Stimson Center working on Japan. He was a Visiting Research Fellow at Keio University from 1996 to 1998. Prior to joining the Stimson Center, from 1993 to 1996, he was Asia Program Associate at the Woodrow Wilson International Center. He is finishing a dissertation on Japanese policy toward China at Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies.

Yuki Tatsumi is a Research Associate at the Henry L. Stimson Center. Prior to joining the Stimson Center, she served at the Embassy of Japan in Washington, DC as a Special Assistant for Political Affairs from 1996 to 1999. She has a M.A. in Japan Studies and International Economics from Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies.

Mark Valencia, Ph.D., is a Senior Fellow at the East-West Center in Hawaii. He is co-author of Sharing the Resources of the South China Sea, and author of A Maritime Regime for North-East Asia, as well as numerous other books and reports on maritime issues in Asia. He recently received an Abe Fellowship from the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership to carry out research on Maritime Confidence Building in Northeast Asia.

Jianwei Wang, Ph.D., is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point. He is the author of Limited Adversaries: Post-Cold War U.S.–China Mutual Images, as well as articles and reports on Sino–American relations and East Asian security affairs. He was previously a Senior Fellow at the Atlantic Council and a Research Fellow at the East–West Center in Hawaii.