

About the Authors

Rajesh M. Basrur is Director, Center for Global Studies, Mumbai. He has taught at Mumbai University (1978-2000). He has also been a Visiting Fellow at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (1995-96), the Henry L. Stimson Center (2001), the Brookings Institution (2001-2002), Sandia National Laboratories (2002), and Stanford University (2002-2003). He has published Security in the New Millennium (New Delhi: Research Press, 2001) and India's External Relations: A Theoretical Analysis (New Delhi: Commonwealth Publishers, 2000). He is the editor of Perspectives on India's Defence and Arms Control (Mumbai: University of Mumbai, 1999).

Ziad Haider is a Research Assistant at the Henry L. Stimson Center's South Asia program. He graduated from Yale College in May 2003 with a Bachelor's degree in Political Science, concentrating in International Relations. His thesis, Politics, Trade, and Islam Along the Karakoram Highway, examined the triangular relationship between Pakistan, China, and Chinese Xinjiang's Muslim Uyghurs and is pending publication in the Asian Survey. He is the co-editor, along with Michael Krepon, of Reducing Nuclear Dangers in South Asia (Washington DC: Henry L. Stimson Center, 2004).

Rodney W. Jones is the President of Policy Architects International. He is an expert on strategic arms control and nuclear security policy, the spread of nuclear weapons, and regional security in the Middle East and Asia. Dr. Jones served from 1989 through 1994 in the US Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and in the Geneva negotiations on the INF and START treaties. He produced Tracking Nuclear Proliferation: A Guide in Maps and Charts (1998) for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He is the author of Religious Radicalism and Nuclear Confrontation in South Asia (New Delhi: Media House, 2004) and Minimum Nuclear Deterrence Postures in South Asia: An Overview (Report for the Defense Threat Reduction Agency, October 2001).

Feroz Hassan Khan is an Adjunct Professor and Senior Researcher at the Department of National Security Affairs and Center for Contemporary Conflict at the Naval Post Graduate School in Monterey, California. He served for thirty years in the Pakistan Army and retired with the rank of Brigadier General. His postings included Director, Arms Control and Disarmament Affairs, within the Strategic Plans Division, Joint Services Headquarters. He has held a series of visiting fellowships at Stanford University's Center for International Studies and Arms Control; the Brookings Institution; Center for Non-Proliferation Studies at the Monterey Institute of International Studies; and the Cooperative Monitoring Center, Sandia National Laboratories.

Michael Krepon is the President Emeritus of the Henry L. Stimson Center, having served as Founding President and CEO from 1989-2000. He directs programming at the Stimson Center on South Asia, arms control, and space security. In addition, he is a Visiting Professor in the Politics Department at the University of Virginia. He has previously worked in the Carter Administration, on Capitol Hill, and at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. His most recent books are Cooperative Threat Reduction, Missile Defense, and the Nuclear Future (Palgrave Macmillan, 2003) and Space Assurance or Space Dominance? The Case Against Weaponizing Space (Washington DC: Henry L. Stimson Center, 2003). An edited volume, Nuclear Risk Reduction in South Asia, will be published by Palgrave Macmillan later this year.

Rahul Roy-Chaudhury is a Research Fellow for South Asia at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), London, where he manages its new South Asia program. Earlier, he was a Senior Research Fellow at the Department of War Studies at King's College, London. During 2000-02, he served in the National Security Council Secretariat in the Prime Minister's Office in India. Prior to his official appointment, he was on the faculty of the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses in New Delhi. He has published two books, India's Maritime Security (New Delhi: IDSA & Knowledge World, 2000) and Sea Power and Indian Security (London: Brassey's, 1995).

Charles L. Thornton is currently a Research Fellow at the Center for International and Security Studies in the School of Public Policy at the University of Maryland, where he is also pursuing a Ph.D. in international security policy. Mr. Thornton spent over six years as an employee of Science Applications International Corporation, helping the US Department of Defense to manage and implement the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program. His areas of expertise include US-Russian strategic relations, the safety and security of Russia's nuclear warheads, international fissile material control and accounting policies, and international terrorism. He continues to consult for the government on nuclear threat reduction cooperation issues.